A PROCLAMATION

WHEREAS, the State of North Carolina plays a vital role in identifying and responding to cybersecurity threats that might have a significant impact on our individual and collective data security and privacy; and

WHEREAS, North Carolina's whole-of-state approach to cybersecurity and the work of the North Carolina Joint Cybersecurity Task Force provide for increased threat intelligence sharing, enhanced prevention, preparedness, and response, and a unified approach to statewide cyber defense; and

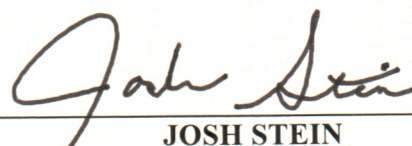

WHEREAS, cyberattacks are ever-evolving, and new technologies, such as generative artificial intelligence, are enabling more sophisticated cyberattacks that continue to be an increasing concern for state, local, academic, and health care institutions; and

WHEREAS, North Carolina is committed to investing in and expanding a world-class cybersecurity workforce, building a robust pipeline of skilled professionals, and attracting leading cybersecurity talent and companies to protect our state's digital infrastructure; and

WHEREAS, everyone can help protect themselves from phishing, viruses, malware, and loss of sensitive data by developing good cyber habits, such as monitoring their accounts, being mindful of what they share online, keeping operating systems and applications current with vendor supplied updates, creating strong and unique passwords and changing them periodically, enabling multifactor authentication where possible, and installing antivirus programs and firewalls;

NOW, THEREFORE, I, JOSH STEIN, Governor of the State of North Carolina, do hereby proclaim October 2025 as "CYBERSECURITY AWARENESS MONTH" in North Carolina and commend its observance to all citizens.
